

VETERAN OF BOER WAR LOCATES HERE

FRANK VAN AMBURG HAS HAD THE MOST VARIED CAREER.

CONFIRMED GLOBE TROTTER

First Lieutenant in Boer Army;
Texas Wife Made Him Turn Down Pension.

By C. E. ROGERS.

Frank Van Amburg, electrician and engineer, at the Brady hotel, very much had the most varied career of any man in Tulsa. But he is proud of his title of first lieutenant in the Boer army and wears four oak leaves to speak for nearly three years of active service in the Transvaal where he fought the British.

Van Amburg is a philanthropist by virtue of the influence of his wife, a daughter of Texas state. When the Boer war was over the British army, van Amburg's command was short. The brave little Dutchman in the south of Africa had fought hard the unenviable odds against them for the cause they valued far above their lives. So when the war was over, Great Britain decided to give the courageous soldiers a pension. A first lieutenant is eligible to $65 a month. Van Amburg is eligible to that amount and $12 extra for his wounds but his wife told him that he was plenty able to make a living for himself and that he must appropriate the sum to the military fund for widows and orphans. Like the good husband he is he complied with his wife's request.

FRANK VAN AMBURG.

Quick Action.

Van Amburg tells a little anecdote which he asserts has never yet been published. General Methuen, a British soldier, was captured and brought before Christian De Wet, the Boer general, whose wife and daughter were the only women in the camp. The general won him the title of the "Black Devil." "Are you the Queen's Fusiliers?" asked De Wet. General Methuen admitted that he was. "Keep him all night," he ordered. A message was sent to Gen. Bull, president of the Boer republic, informing him of the British capture and awaiting his pleasure. The reply came in a short time. It read: "Keep no prisoners, no cowards." De Wet took Methuen's sword, broke it over his knee, and handed the hilt to his own. "Go," said De Wet, "but if you are ever captured again you will be shot without court martial."

Methuen left the service on the excuse of ill health and sailed for England. He never again appeared in the Transvaal.

Smoked Cigarettes For 22 Years

Habit Was Ruining Him,
But He Conquered It in Three Days Easily.

The portrait below is that of Mr. P. J. Blumquist, a well-known citizen of living fame. Young man who lived his life in the habit of smoking, but he has now conquered the habit of smoking, and he is now a healthy, happy man.

A valuable, interesting book on how to overcome the tobacco habit in three days. It is written by Dr. J. W. Woods, 224 Sixth Ave., New York, N. Y., and will send it free to anyone who writes asking for it. It is a very anxious that all who are victims of the craving for tobacco, cigar, or cigarette may save themselves easily, quickly, gently and lastingly. Eyes, heart, kidneys and stomach improved, nerves tranquilized, memory improved, vigor gained and other benefits reported.—Adv.

QUIT TOBACCO, GAINED 25 LBS.

Everybody in Mangum, Oklahoma, is talking about the big change in Al Reeves, who was 25 lbs. in the habit of smoking, and after getting the book he learned how the habit could be conquered in three days. Now he weighs that he is forever free from the craving and is in the best of health.

BOOK GIVEN FREE.

A valuable, interesting book on how to overcome the tobacco habit in three days. It is written by Dr. J. W. Woods, 224 Sixth Ave., New York, N. Y., and will send it free to anyone who writes asking for it. It is a very anxious that all who are victims of the craving for tobacco, cigar, or cigarette may save themselves easily, quickly, gently and lastingly. Eyes, heart, kidneys and stomach improved, nerves tranquilized, memory improved, vigor gained and other benefits reported.—Adv.

and then to Melbourne, from which place he sailed to England, all the time stopping over enough to make the journey in place as an engineer and electrician.

The United States was the next place he went to. He went to Chicago, where he was employed for a short time. He was then employed in the United States a second time, and found up on the shores of Lake Michigan.

Saw an Earthquake.

This was in 1905, the year of the Mexican earthquake. Van Amburg describes very realistically the awful tragedy. It was the greatest earthquake that he has ever seen. He says that he saw 7,000 dead bodies at one time.

On the night of the first shock Van Amburg had been in the habit of smoking. As he returned to bed late in the evening he noticed that the smoke seemed to billow but he did not anticipate the quake as few in the whole city did.

He was awakened in the middle of the night with the initial movement. It was the front of the stone building in which he was sleeping. Van Amburg jumped to the ground and ran to an open place near, where he was safe from the falling stone which killed a number of thousands.

Big Fleets.

Van Amburg knows the distinction of being the fifth white man to travel the country of Louisiana in south-east Texas. The name means "Louisiana," but it is a name that is not used, a feeling that Van Amburg has of the trip had to be made of canoe boats. He and his one companion had to sleep in the native and huts which contain only one opening.

The Boer veteran said that he never encountered more formidable enemies in all his many battles than he found in the flocks of Louisiana. They were a quarter of an inch long, according to the Boer.

Van Amburg speaks six languages: Italian, English, German, Bohemian, African and his native tongue. He has the reputation of being a man who is not to be trifled with. He has been in the United States most of his work is confined to hotel engineering. He learned the trade in his native land. He tells of four long years of apprenticeship without wages but he declares that this is the only method by which the trade can be learned properly.

The globe trotter is something of a coin collector along with his many other interests. He holds a Roman coin of 515 B. C., English coins of the sixteenth century, a coin of Pope Pius IX, and a number of other interesting pieces. He says that he will give them to any collector who shows that he has enough of a start to appreciate the value of them.

A Fighting Family.

Van Amburg's parents are natives of the United States. His father was a second lieutenant of the northern army in the war between the states. He is still living, and like his son, a confirmed globe trotter.

The little Boer says he likes Tulsa fine and may yet settle down and establish his home in which he considers a "mighty good town." His wife joined him from Dodge City the latter part of the week. Van Amburg has been working at the Brady for two weeks.

Some of the young society folks have taken up "The Million Dollar Mystery" club. It is the belief that much fun and maybe much profit may be obtained by a united effort in the solution of the great story. The fourth installment appears elsewhere in the World today, and will be shown in pictures at the Palace theatre today and Monday.

ORPHEUM THEATRE.

"The Girl of the Mountains" will be the offering of the Bessie Dainty players for the first half of the week at the Orpheum—beginning with a matinee. It is more than probable that this play has never been seen here before, and as it gives Miss Dainty a very similar role to the one she played in "The Little Runaway," it is sure to please. Its scenes are laid in the mountains of Kentucky, its characters are true to the mountaineer type, and the play itself breathes the very atmosphere of the grassy chivalry. To make it still be to the best of the best productions the company will make. The latter half of the week the company will present a superb dramatization of Miss Southworth's internationally famous novel, "The Sign of the Cross." It is a novel which in the last fifty years has enjoyed a greater popularity than has this one, and the dramatization of it to be used by the Bessie Dainty players retains all the splendid situations and lines of the book. To those who have read the book the play will be a treat. To those who have seen it played the play will be a delightful surprise. Miss Dainty will be seen in this production in a role singularly suited to her charming comedy style, and one which gives her exceptional opportunity. There will be the usual daily matinees.

YALE THEATRE.

Offering the very best of motion pictures shown on a mirror screen and shown for the first time in Tulsa. YOU SEE NO REPEATERS HERE.

RODMAN LAW, THE HUMAN BULLET.

Shocking to the common is part of his daily routine. "Three-fourths mathematics and the rest blank." There you have the Human Bullet's recipe for doing a "bullet" off the Brooklyn bridge, taking your morning plunge on horseback into the Harlem River, and a whole lot more, being blown up in mid-air by 2,000 pounds of gunpowder, standing on your head on the golden ball atop the Sinner building, or any of the hundred little stunts that are the daily occurrence in the life of the Bullet.

All of this because it was the Human Bullet—Mr. Rodman Law, of Brooklyn—who started nervous women in trolley cars crossing the Wil-

ANOTHER WEEK GONE WITH NO PROGRESS

TRUST LEGISLATION IS NO
NEARER A FINAL SOLUTION.

NO ADJOURNMENT IN SIGHT

Senators Believe the Session Will Run Late into the Coming Fall.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Another week has ended with the trust program in the senate little nearer completion than two weeks ago. In committee the chairmen were unable to rally enough senators for voting.

The status of the Clayton bill before the judiciary committee and the railroad securities bill in the interstate commerce committee, made it certain that at least another week would pass before the complete program could be submitted to the senate.

Prolonged delays in bills have discouraged those now optimistic for a September adjournment. Several Democratic senators have admitted the session will extend into fall if all legislation agreed upon by administration leaders is to be passed.

Today a minority of the judiciary committee opposed consideration of the Clayton bill. It practically was decided not to amend the section relating to prohibition of holding companies. The section relating to acquisition of stock has been amended. Labor, horticultural and agricultural organizations formed for industrial welfare alone are exempted. Consumers and financial organizations, seriously included, have been eliminated.

The interstate commerce committee would today to determine whether the interstate commerce commission should be empowered to both regulate and determine the rate to which proceeds should be put on merely regulate rates. No action was taken because of lack of a quorum. The committee will meet again Monday.

A Fighting Family.

Van Amburg's parents are natives of the United States. His father was a second lieutenant of the northern army in the war between the states. He is still living, and like his son, a confirmed globe trotter.

The little Boer says he likes Tulsa fine and may yet settle down and establish his home in which he considers a "mighty good town." His wife joined him from Dodge City the latter part of the week. Van Amburg has been working at the Brady for two weeks.

Some of the young society folks have taken up "The Million Dollar Mystery" club. It is the belief that much fun and maybe much profit may be obtained by a united effort in the solution of the great story. The fourth installment appears elsewhere in the World today, and will be shown in pictures at the Palace theatre today and Monday.

Van Amburg speaks six languages: Italian, English, German, Bohemian, African and his native tongue. He has the reputation of being a man who is not to be trifled with. He has been in the United States most of his work is confined to hotel engineering. He learned the trade in his native land. He tells of four long years of apprenticeship without wages but he declares that this is the only method by which the trade can be learned properly.

The globe trotter is something of a coin collector along with his many other interests. He holds a Roman coin of 515 B. C., English coins of the sixteenth century, a coin of Pope Pius IX, and a number of other interesting pieces. He says that he will give them to any collector who shows that he has enough of a start to appreciate the value of them.

Van Amburg's parents are natives of the United States. His father was a second lieutenant of the northern army in the war between the states. He is still living, and like his son, a confirmed globe trotter.

The little Boer says he likes Tulsa fine and may yet settle down and establish his home in which he considers a "mighty good town." His wife joined him from Dodge City the latter part of the week. Van Amburg has been working at the Brady for two weeks.

Some of the young society folks have taken up "The Million Dollar Mystery" club. It is the belief that much fun and maybe much profit may be obtained by a united effort in the solution of the great story. The fourth installment appears elsewhere in the World today, and will be shown in pictures at the Palace theatre today and Monday.

Van Amburg speaks six languages: Italian, English, German, Bohemian, African and his native tongue. He has the reputation of being a man who is not to be trifled with. He has been in the United States most of his work is confined to hotel engineering. He learned the trade in his native land. He tells of four long years of apprenticeship without wages but he declares that this is the only method by which the trade can be learned properly.

The globe trotter is something of a coin collector along with his many other interests. He holds a Roman coin of 515 B. C., English coins of the sixteenth century, a coin of Pope Pius IX, and a number of other interesting pieces. He says that he will give them to any collector who shows that he has enough of a start to appreciate the value of them.

Van Amburg's parents are natives of the United States. His father was a second lieutenant of the northern army in the war between the states. He is still living, and like his son, a confirmed globe trotter.

The little Boer says he likes Tulsa fine and may yet settle down and establish his home in which he considers a "mighty good town." His wife joined him from Dodge City the latter part of the week. Van Amburg has been working at the Brady for two weeks.

Some of the young society folks have taken up "The Million Dollar Mystery" club. It is the belief that much fun and maybe much profit may be obtained by a united effort in the solution of the great story. The fourth installment appears elsewhere in the World today, and will be shown in pictures at the Palace theatre today and Monday.

Van Amburg speaks six languages: Italian, English, German, Bohemian, African and his native tongue. He has the reputation of being a man who is not to be trifled with. He has been in the United States most of his work is confined to hotel engineering. He learned the trade in his native land. He tells of four long years of apprenticeship without wages but he declares that this is the only method by which the trade can be learned properly.

The globe trotter is something of a coin collector along with his many other interests. He holds a Roman coin of 515 B. C., English coins of the sixteenth century, a coin of Pope Pius IX, and a number of other interesting pieces. He says that he will give them to any collector who shows that he has enough of a start to appreciate the value of them.

Van Amburg's parents are natives of the United States. His father was a second lieutenant of the northern army in the war between the states. He is still living, and like his son, a confirmed globe trotter.

The little Boer says he likes Tulsa fine and may yet settle down and establish his home in which he considers a "mighty good town." His wife joined him from Dodge City the latter part of the week. Van Amburg has been working at the Brady for two weeks.

Some of the young society folks have taken up "The Million Dollar Mystery" club. It is the belief that much fun and maybe much profit may be obtained by a united effort in the solution of the great story. The fourth installment appears elsewhere in the World today, and will be shown in pictures at the Palace theatre today and Monday.

Van Amburg speaks six languages: Italian, English, German, Bohemian, African and his native tongue. He has the reputation of being a man who is not to be trifled with. He has been in the United States most of his work is confined to hotel engineering. He learned the trade in his native land. He tells of four long years of apprenticeship without wages but he declares that this is the only method by which the trade can be learned properly.

The globe trotter is something of a coin collector along with his many other interests. He holds a Roman coin of 515 B. C., English coins of the sixteenth century, a coin of Pope Pius IX, and a number of other interesting pieces. He says that he will give them to any collector who shows that he has enough of a start to appreciate the value of them.

Van Amburg's parents are natives of the United States. His father was a second lieutenant of the northern army in the war between the states. He is still living, and like his son, a confirmed globe trotter.

The little Boer says he likes Tulsa fine and may yet settle down and establish his home in which he considers a "mighty good town." His wife joined him from Dodge City the latter part of the week. Van Amburg has been working at the Brady for two weeks.

Some of the young society folks have taken up "The Million Dollar Mystery" club. It is the belief that much fun and maybe much profit may be obtained by a united effort in the solution of the great story. The fourth installment appears elsewhere in the World today, and will be shown in pictures at the Palace theatre today and Monday.

Van Amburg speaks six languages: Italian, English, German, Bohemian, African and his native tongue. He has the reputation of being a man who is not to be trifled with. He has been in the United States most of his work is confined to hotel engineering. He learned the trade in his native land. He tells of four long years of apprenticeship without wages but he declares that this is the only method by which the trade can be learned properly.

The globe trotter is something of a coin collector along with his many other interests. He holds a Roman coin of 515 B. C., English coins of the sixteenth century, a coin of Pope Pius IX, and a number of other interesting pieces. He says that he will give them to any collector who shows that he has enough of a start to appreciate the value of them.

Van Amburg's parents are natives of the United States. His father was a second lieutenant of the northern army in the war between the states. He is still living, and like his son, a confirmed globe trotter.

The little Boer says he likes Tulsa fine and may yet settle down and establish his home in which he considers a "mighty good town." His wife joined him from Dodge City the latter part of the week. Van Amburg has been working at the Brady for two weeks.

Some of the young society folks have taken up "The Million Dollar Mystery" club. It is the belief that much fun and maybe much profit may be obtained by a united effort in the solution of the great story. The fourth installment appears elsewhere in the World today, and will be shown in pictures at the Palace theatre today and Monday.

Van Amburg speaks six languages: Italian, English, German, Bohemian, African and his native tongue. He has the reputation of being a man who is not to be trifled with. He has been in the United States most of his work is confined to hotel engineering. He learned the trade in his native land. He tells of four long years of apprenticeship without wages but he declares that this is the only method by which the trade can be learned properly.

The globe trotter is something of a coin collector along with his many other interests. He holds a Roman coin of 515 B. C., English coins of the sixteenth century, a coin of Pope Pius IX, and a number of other interesting pieces. He says that he will give them to any collector who shows that he has enough of a start to appreciate the value of them.

Van Amburg's parents are natives of the United States. His father was a second lieutenant of the northern army in the war between the states. He is still living, and like his son, a confirmed globe trotter.

The little Boer says he likes Tulsa fine and may yet settle down and establish his home in which he considers a "mighty good town." His wife joined him from Dodge City the latter part of the week. Van Amburg has been working at the Brady for two weeks.

Some of the young society folks have taken up "The Million Dollar Mystery" club. It is the belief that much fun and maybe much profit may be obtained by a united effort in the solution of the great story. The fourth installment appears elsewhere in the World today, and will be shown in pictures at the Palace theatre today and Monday.

Van Amburg speaks six languages: Italian, English, German, Bohemian, African and his native tongue. He has the reputation of being a man who is not to be trifled with. He has been in the United States most of his work is confined to hotel engineering. He learned the trade in his native land. He tells of four long years of apprenticeship without wages but he declares that this is the only method by which the trade can be learned properly.

The globe trotter is something of a coin collector along with his many other interests. He holds a Roman coin of 515 B. C., English coins of the sixteenth century, a coin of Pope Pius IX, and a number of other interesting pieces. He says that he will give them to any collector who shows that he has enough of a start to appreciate the value of them.

Van Amburg's parents are natives of the United States. His father was a second lieutenant of the northern army in the war between the states. He is still living, and like his son, a confirmed globe trotter.

The little Boer says he likes Tulsa fine and may yet settle down and establish his home in which he considers a "mighty good town." His wife joined him from Dodge City the latter part of the week. Van Amburg has been working at the Brady for two weeks.

Some of the young society folks have taken up "The Million Dollar Mystery" club. It is the belief that much fun and maybe much profit may be obtained by a united effort in the solution of the great story. The fourth installment appears elsewhere in the World today, and will be shown in pictures at the Palace theatre today and Monday.

Van Amburg speaks six languages: Italian, English, German, Bohemian, African and his native tongue. He has the reputation of being a man who is not to be trifled with. He has been in the United States most of his work is confined to hotel engineering. He learned the trade in his native land. He tells of four long years of apprenticeship without wages but he declares that this is the only method by which the trade can be learned properly.

The globe trotter is something of a coin collector along with his many other interests. He holds a Roman coin of 515 B. C., English coins of the sixteenth century, a coin of Pope Pius IX, and a number of other interesting pieces. He says that he will give them to any collector who shows that he has enough of a start to appreciate the value of them.

Van Amburg's parents are natives of the United States. His father was a second lieutenant of the northern army in the war between the states. He is still living, and like his son, a confirmed globe trotter.

The little Boer says he likes Tulsa fine and may yet settle down and establish his home in which he considers a "mighty good town." His wife joined him from Dodge City the latter part of the week. Van Amburg has been working at the Brady for two weeks.

Some of the young society folks have taken up "The Million Dollar Mystery" club. It is the belief that much fun and maybe much profit may be obtained by a united effort in the solution of the great story. The fourth installment appears elsewhere in the World today, and will be shown in pictures at the Palace theatre today and Monday.

Van Amburg speaks six languages: Italian, English, German, Bohemian, African and his native tongue. He has the reputation of being a man who is not to be trifled with. He has been in the United States most of his work is confined to hotel engineering. He learned the trade in his native land. He tells of four long years of apprenticeship without wages but he declares that this is the only method by which the trade can be learned properly.

The globe trotter is something of a coin collector along with his many other interests. He holds a Roman coin of 515 B. C., English coins of the sixteenth century, a coin of Pope Pius IX, and a number of other interesting pieces. He says that he will give them to any collector who shows that he has enough of a start to appreciate the value of them.

Van Amburg's parents are natives of the United States. His father was a second lieutenant of the northern army in the war between the states. He is still living, and like his son, a confirmed globe trotter.

The little Boer says he likes Tulsa fine and may yet settle down and establish his home in which he considers a "mighty good town." His wife joined him from Dodge City the latter part of the week. Van Amburg has been working at the Brady for two weeks.

Some of the young society folks have taken up "The Million Dollar Mystery" club. It is the belief that much fun and maybe much profit may be obtained by a united effort in the solution of the great story. The fourth installment appears elsewhere in the World today, and will be shown in pictures at the Palace theatre today and Monday.

Van Amburg speaks six languages: Italian, English, German, Bohemian, African and his native tongue. He has the reputation of being a man who is not to be trifled with. He has been in the United States most of his work is confined to hotel engineering. He learned the trade in his native land. He tells of four long years of apprenticeship without wages but he declares that this is the only method by which the trade can be learned properly.

The globe trotter is something of a coin collector along with his many other interests. He holds a Roman coin of 515 B. C., English coins of the sixteenth century, a coin of Pope Pius IX, and a number of other interesting pieces. He says that he will give them to any collector who shows that he has enough of a start to appreciate the value of them.

Van Amburg's parents are natives of the United States. His father was a second lieutenant of the northern army in the war between the states. He is still living, and like his son, a confirmed globe trotter.

The little Boer says he likes Tulsa fine and may yet settle down and establish his home in which he considers a "mighty good town." His wife joined him from Dodge City the latter part of the week. Van Amburg has been working at the Brady for two weeks.

Some of the young society folks have taken up "The Million Dollar Mystery" club. It is the belief that much fun and maybe much profit may be obtained by a united effort in the solution of the great story. The fourth installment appears elsewhere in the World today, and will be shown in pictures at the Palace theatre today and Monday.

Van Amburg speaks six languages: Italian, English, German, Bohemian, African and his native tongue. He has the reputation of being a man who is not to be trifled with. He has been in the United States most of his work is confined to hotel engineering. He learned the trade in his native land. He tells of four long years of apprenticeship without wages but he declares that this is the only method by which the trade can be learned properly.

The globe trotter is something of a coin collector along with his many other interests. He holds a Roman coin of 515 B. C., English coins of the sixteenth century, a coin of Pope Pius IX, and a number of other interesting pieces. He says that he will give them to any collector who shows that he has enough of a start to appreciate the value of them.

Van Amburg's parents are natives of the United States. His father was a second lieutenant of the northern army in the war between the states. He is still living, and like his son, a confirmed globe trotter.

The little Boer says he likes Tulsa fine and may yet settle down and establish his home in which he considers a "mighty good town." His wife joined him from Dodge City the latter part of the week. Van Amburg has been working at the Brady for two weeks.

Some of the young society folks have taken up "The Million Dollar Mystery" club. It is the belief that much fun and maybe much profit may be obtained by a united effort in the solution of the great story. The fourth installment appears elsewhere in the World today, and will be shown in pictures at the Palace theatre today and Monday.

Van Amburg speaks six languages: Italian, English, German, Bohemian, African and his native tongue. He has the reputation of being a man who is not to be trifled with. He has been in the United States most of his work is confined to hotel engineering. He learned the trade in his native land. He tells of four long years of apprenticeship without wages but he declares that this is the only method by which the trade can be learned properly.

Beautiful Florence Gray
—stunningly beautiful—millionaire heiress, is trapped by a band of conspirators seeking her fortune. Time after time, by daring acts—by seemingly impossible feats—does this young girl shatter their plans—baffle them. You'll sympathize with beautiful Florence Gray, the heroine in

THE MILLION DOLLAR MYSTERY

By Harold MacGrath

Solve the Mystery and Win $10,000

Fourth Episode

TODAY AND MONDAY

AT THE

PALACE

THE COOL THEATRE

Ask for a Synopsis of Preceding Chapters

BIG MUNICIPAL FLAG RAISING LABOR DAY

PARK BOARD ANNOUNCES
PLANS FOR UNIQUE CELEBRATION.

IMMENSE FLAG PURCHASED

Will be Held at Owen Park; Band to Play; Given With Military Pomp.

For the purpose of demonstrating to the entire world that the spirit of patriotism is firmly instilled in the people of all nations, a municipal flag-raising will be held at Owen park, on Labor Day, which this year falls on Monday, September 7.

Military Exercises.

The exercises will be held at beautiful Owen park, where the highly successful fourth of July celebration was given this year. An immense permanent flag will be erected in the center of the park. The ceremony of raising the flag will be attended by high military pomp, with the Boy Scouts, National Guard and other military and semi-military organizations participating. The leaders of the American Revolution, the Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy, and other societies will be invited to take part in the exercises.

There will be addresses by leading citizens, including several out-of-town notables, and the Tulsa band will give an all afternoon concert in the park. It will be the only general celebration to be given in Tulsa Labor Day, and for that reason thousands of persons will probably take advantage of the occasion to spend Owen park and witness the inspiring events of the day.

A Giant Flag.

The park board has purchased an immense flag to be used for the occasion. It is probably the largest American flag in the state of Oklahoma. The flag will be kept permanently at the park.

The park board determined upon the flag-raising celebration shortly after the fourth of July entertainment, which attracted thousands to the park. The citizens generally were pleased with this modern and practical use of the park that the park board members settled then and there upon a policy of staging attractions that will draw the populace to not only Owen park, but all the other city playgrounds, and to make them not only a "thing of beauty," but a "joy forever" to men, women and children.

The various union labor organizations will be asked to take part in the flag-raising celebration. It will probably be the largest public patriotic celebration in the history of the city. The park board is now working out the plans for the day and will shortly announce a complete program. Everything will be absolutely free, even to the bathing beach and bath house, both of which are furnished to the citizens of Tulsa without cost. There is ample shade and lawn in Owen park to accommodate 15,000 persons, and fully this amount of people are expected to gather there for the flag-raising.

School Children to Take Part.

Park Superintendent John Molsenbacher and a corps of assistants will begin work shortly on the immense flagpole that will be necessary to float

Majestic Theatre

"ME AND BILL"